Have We No Charity?

Our attention has several times been called to the existence of a nuisance on South Main street, and which is a source of constant annoyance to the residents of that part of the city.

Residing on the West side of Main, between 13th and 14th streets, is a woman, whose relatives, residing at Lexington, Danville and in Bourbon, are among the best people of the Blue Grass State. The woman referred to is a confirmed morphine fiend, and drinks whisky excessively. So low down in the scale of human degeneration has she fallen, that she visits the disreputable joints in Claysville in quest of liquor. Piece by piece she has disposed of her furnishing in order to buy whisky and the deadly drug that is carrying her slowly but surely to an ignominious and premature grave, until scarcely anything remains in her desolated home. Constantly under the influence of these intoxicating drugs, she has become an insufferable nuisance, and her daily and nightly antics a source of great annoyance to the immediate neighborhood.

Have we not among us some one who is charitable enough to rescue this fallen woman? Have we no conservators of this city's welfare, no administrators of the law, who will send her to a house for fallen women, and save the life that is so rapidly wending its way into an abyss of earthly ruin, and relieve the people of that neighborhood of an insufferable nuisance?

Go Thou and Do Likewise.

It is one thing to feel an interest in the city of your birth or adoption and another to show it. It doesn't take the knowledge of a Solomon to realize the great benefit that our handsomely illustrated history of Paris and Bourbon county will be to this community. A prominent officer of the order of Knights Templar has already placed an order with us for fifty or more of these histories to send to the numerous commanders in other cities in order to let them know something of the city that will entertain them at the next conclave to be held here next year. Every citizen should take a special pride in this History and help to make it a living monument to the industry and thrift of Paris and Bourbon county.

Peddler Arrested.

William Willis, a chicken peddler, of near Mt. Sterling, disposed a load of the toothsome birds here Wednesday. He started to tank up on bad whiskey and proceeding down Main street became very boisterous. Chief of Police Hill was "Charley on the spot," and escorted the hilarious peddler to Hotel de Judy, where he remained during the night. His horse and wagon were placed in a livery stable over night. He had $30 in currency on his person, which Jailor Judy took possession of, until his troubles could be investigated by Judge Hinton, which resulted in a fine of $7.50 and costs.

Found Dead.

Nathan H. Woodcock, one of the oldest and best-known knights of the grip in Kentucky, was found dead Wednesday morning in his bed by the porter of the Tribble House, Junction City. He was traveling for the Power Grocery Company, of this city, at the time of his death and was a popular and successful salesman.

Death Claims an Honored Citizen.

Capt. James M. Thomas, one of Bourbon's most prominent and wealthiest citizens died at Ford, Ky., yesterday at 3 o'clock p. m., after a protracted illness.

Capt. Thomas was born at Flat Rock, this county, September 5, 1833, and was consequently nearly 72 years of age. He was the son of Esquire David Thomas, a well-to-do and highly respected farmer of that period. When a boy he was quite delicate and was not compelled to attend school regularly, though he had natural fondness for books.

He received the rudiments of his educational training at Mt. Sterling Academy under the tutorship of Prof. Hugh B. Todd.

As he grew into young manhood he developed a strong physical and mental constitution and was a great reader and thinker.

In July, 1853, he married Miss Annie Rogers, who survives him. At the outbreak of the Civil War, Mr. Thomas sympathized with the cause of the South, and raising a company, of which he was captain, entered the service of the Confederate States, being in the command of Generals Humphrey Marshall and John S. Williams. He saw service in Kentucky and Virginia and was in several hot engagements. He was mustered out in 1862, and returning home went to Canada, where he engaged in the lumber business.

At the close of the war he returned to his native State, locating in Paris, where for twenty-five years he was one of her most progressive and enterprising citizens.

Capt. Thomas was religiously inclined and in early youth united with the Christian church, and during his long business career always took an active part in church work. He was an Elder in the Paris Christian church, for years superintendent of its Sunday school and a leader in its weekly prayer meeting. He always threw the weight of his influence on the side of educational work and for a number of years was President of the Board of Education.

He took great interest in the people of the mountains, where his great business enterprises were developed, erecting several schools and churches out of his own purse and supplied them with teachers and preachers.

Capt. Thomas took a prominent part in politics. He was defeated for member of the Constitutional Convention in 1890, but later was elected to the State Senate, where he became conspicuous as a leader during the memorable Goebel-Taylor contest.

It was as a business man that Capt. Thomas shone with such splendid ability. Several times adversity stared him in the face, but he stemmed the tide of financial panic and disaster, and he passes away one of the wealthiest business men of this section.

He leaves besides his wife, two sons and two daughters—William R. and Robert Lee Thomas, Mrs. Mary Ireland and Mrs. T. E. Moore, Jr., of this city.

The remains will arrive here at 8 o'clock this morning and be taken to the residence on South Main street.

The funeral arrangements have not yet been announced.

The remains will be interred in the handsome granite mausoleum erected by Capt. Thomas in the Paris cemetery at a cost of $8,000.
